Course Description: Students go on an indepth journey through the world of visual communication, learning how to connect with what holds real meaning for them and to explore and express what they know to be true. It is layered with information, experiences and synthesis of image and design making techniques, concepts, history, image decoding, and exploration of the self. Students learn to express their own ideas clearly and powerfully with a well supported concept development process in each project. They develop increasing sophistication in the following sought after work skills (Fortune 500): critical thinking, problem-solving ability, creative thinking, personal development, and communication skills. Finally, students are set up for success with the presence of the Mentor who supports them throughout the program with wit, insight, and recognition.

"Students become more confident in the validity of their own thoughts, and begin to get excited about who they are and what they have to offer. They learn how to align their skills, abilities and minds with their true selves. And this is a powerful union."
